Euthyphro replies, that 'Piety is what is dear to the gods, and impiety is what is not dear to them.' But may there not be differences of opinion, as among men, so also among the gods? Especially, about good and evil, which have no fixed rule; and these are precisely the sort of differences which give rise to quarrels.

This is the script to the 1987 movie Empire of the Sun which is based on an autobiographical book by J. G. Ballard. I am posting it as a response to the politicking going on by former CBC employee Tetsuro Shigematsu who has written something called Empire of the Son ... which is somewhat troubling.

S: Who is it? E: My father. S: My dear sir! Your own father? E: Certainly. S: What is the charge? What is the case about? E: Murder, Socrates. S: Good heavens! Certainly, Euthyphro, most men would not know how they could do this and be right. It is not the part of anyone to do this, but of one who is far advanced in wisdom.
